

Pupperella

By Katherine Angelis

Once upon a time there was a sweet dog named Pupperella. She lived on a mountain with her stepsisters and stepmother, who were cats. One day the stepsisters and stepmother got an invitation to a fancy ball. All the town would be there.

The stepmother and stepsisters were so excited when the day of the ball finally arrived. Pupperella wanted to go, but the stepmother said “no you must stay home and clean.” She was so sad she began to cry.

Then a parrot appeared, and Pupperella was frightened. The parrot spoke and said "I am your Parrot Godmother." "What's wrong my dear?" said the Parrot Godmother.

Pupperella said, "I can't go to the ball because I do not have anything to wear."

"I have a beautiful dress if you would like to borrow it," said the Parrot Godmother.

"Yes I would love to, thank you," said Pupperella. "But how do I get there?"

"You will use a seed carriage," said Parrot Godmother.

"Bye, and thank you again!" said Pupperella.

"You're welcome!" said Parrot Godmother.

Pupperella rode off to the ball. When she got there, her step sisters didn't recognize her and said "will you dance and play with us?"

"Ummm, I guess so," said Pupperella.

They had so much fun dancing and playing. Pupperella finally revealed her identity to her stepsisters. They were surprised that they had just danced and played with Pupparella. They found out that dogs and cats can play and dance together. They danced until two in the morning.

The End!
